Broschár does Ukkonen, and Ukkonen does Broschár. For this unusual joint exhibition two painters are inspired by, influenced by, steal, borrow, copy, reinterpret, recreate, appropriate and pay homage to each other's work. While remaining true to their own approach in terms of artistic process, techniques and style, the motif and composition reference existing works by the other. To rule out any influence, the paintings selected will remain secret until the opening.*

Mona Broschár (*1985) is a painter based in Leipzig, Germany. Through plastic painting, she stylizes banal everyday objects and situations into highly artificial, desirable and sexualized objects. Harmonious and gloomy come in pairs in the scaled-up images that Broschár develops, as they depict a tipping moment, informed by our dazzling consumer, and pop culture. Her paintings are meant to invite virtual consumption, but leave the viewers alone with their desires, since touch is only allowed with the imagination. In this way, the artist addresses the interplay of touch and distance – which has always been indissoluble, not only since digital culture, but specially in painting. She studied Fine Art at the Camberwell College of Arts, London and holds an MA in Painting and Printmaking from the Academy of Visual Arts, Leipzig.

Heidi Ukkonen (*1980) paints captivating scenes that construct a utopian world. Her art blurs reality with the fantastical, depicting characters in imaginative scenarios. Through expert brushstrokes, she reveals intricate interplays, distorting contemporary animations in society. Ukkonen's creative process, influenced by experiences at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Antwerp, bursts with color and humor. Her journey navigates emotions, inviting viewers into extraordinary landscapes where pain resonates with laughter.
